Clouds mar annual temple phenomenon

For the first time in 50 years, sun's rays didn't fall on idol on Sankranti day

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
BENGALURU

Clouds played spoilsport on Thursday while citizens celebrated Sankranti and blocked the Sun's rays from falling on the Shiva Linga at the Gavi Gangadhareshwara Temple in Gavipuram here. It is an annual phenomenon every Sankranti.

The ancient cave temple, said to be renovated by Kempegowda I, is built in such a way that the Sun's rays fall on the south-facing idol on Sankranti day, when the Sun begins to move northwards with respect to Earth.

Somasundara Dixit, chief priest of the temple, said that though the Sun's rays entered the cave temple premises at the expected late afternoon time on Thursday, clouds covered the Sun before the rays could fall on the idol.

"In my experience of nearly 50 years at the temple, this is the first time that something like this has happened," he said.

C.S. Patil, Director, India Meteorological Department, Bengaluru, said that while the State usually enjoyed clear dry weather on Sankranti, this year Bengaluru had cloudy weather, which seemed to have disrupted the annual phenomenon at the temple.

"There was cloud formation observed in the city area because of the impact of easterly winds. Sri Lanka and Kanyakumari region receive rain during this time of the year. This impacting Bengaluru is rare, but not that extraordinary," he said.

In fact, the IMD had on Wednesday forecast isolated spells of rain in south interior Karnataka and the coastal region due to a weather system near Maldives, 4.5 km above the mean sea level.

The IMD has also forecast "fog and mist very likely over Bengaluru over the next four days."
